

HEALTH ALERT NOTICE
Health Alert Notice for International Travelers
Arriving in the United States
from China, Vietnam, and Singapore

TO THE TRAVELER: During your recent travel, you may have been exposed to cases of severe acute respiratory disease syndrome. You should monitor your health for at least 10 days. If you become ill with fever accompanied by cough, or difficulty in breathing, you should consult a physician. To help your physician make a diagnosis, tell him or her about your recent travel to these regions and whether you were in contact with someone who had these symptoms. Please save this card and give it to your physician if you become ill.

TO THE PHYSICIAN: The patient presenting this card may have recently traveled to China, Vietnam, or Singapore where cases of severe acute respiratory syndrome (SARS) have been identified. If you suspect that this patient may have SARS, please contact your city, county, or state health officer (see <http://www.cdc.gov> or call the CDC Emergency Operations Center 770-488-7100).
